Begin Martin Luther King Day weekend with an unforgettable free online discussion about raising awareness of systemic racism and initiatives to dismantle it.

Our panel features Eric Deggans (National Public Radio) and Dave Snyder (Black Lives Matter Cincinnati), moderated by Jerolyn Barbee (National Afro-American Museum Cultural Center).

About the speakers

Eric Deggans is a commentator, author, and NPR's first full-time television critic, appearing on Morning Edition, Here & Now and All Things Considered. His book Race-Baiter: How the Media Wields Dangerous Words to Divide a Nation, was published in October 2012 by Palgrave Macmillan.

Dave Snyder is the founder of Black Lives Matter Cincinnati, which seeks to engage white evangelicals, Trump-supporters, and white progressives in conversations on race with those least comfortable talking about it, through social media.

Jerolyn Barbee is the Assistant Director, National Afro-American Museum Cultural Center, Wilberforce, Ohio.
